

JAIPUR: It was a poignant scene at the village of Army paratrooper Mukut Bihari Meena who died fighting the militants in Kashmir when his five-month-old daughter sat on his coffin and lay on it when his body arrived. For ritual sake little Aaru held the burning stick along with her grandfather Jagannath before the latter completed the formalities of lighting the funeral pyre.

"You sat on the coffin and lied on that without crying. Moments before, you had seen the face of your father. It was very emotional. I and all the Army officers were watching you doing this and I know everyone of us were thinking in our own respective ways but your innocence and your father were at the centre of our thoughts," Jhalawar district collector Jitendra Soni said an emotional letter to the infant that was shared on Facebook.

"Not only this area, but the blessings of every responsible and sensible citizen of the entire country with you. Grow well and make your father's glorious martyrdom your pride," Soni said.

Before the funeral ceremony, when the body in coffin wrapped in the tricolour arrived at his village, the girl sat on the coffin and lay on it. The collector also mentioned how the innocent gesture of Aaru caught the attention of people and made them emotional.

Belonging to a non-descript village 'Ladania' with around 100 houses, 25-year old Meena laid down his life in Kupwara on July 11 and his cremation was performed with full military honours. Public representatives, officials from the Army, district administration, police and thousands of people from different parts of the district paid homage to Meena.
